Where is the Action? The Intersections of Federal and State Policy

State and federal policy, particularly on education and workforce development programs, are inextricably linked. Federal action, or inaction as is often the case of late, drive state policymaking – and state policy actions also draw attention and create momentum at the federal level for more widespread support. We've seen a significant uptick in state policy focusing on CTE in recent years. The session will explore how state leaders are approaching education and workforce issues, how changes at the federal level impact state actions, and how CTE advocates can work effectively at the state level to drive policy.

*Tom Kelly; Policy Director; Education Commission of the States
Autumn Rivera; Senior Policy Specialist; National Conference of State Legislatures*

Moderator: Kate Kreamer; Executive Director; Advance CTE

4:00 p.m. – 4:45 p.m.

Advocacy Breakouts

These breakout sessions will provide you with an opportunity to learn more about specific advocacy strategies, resources and activities that can help support CTE at the local, state and federal levels.

Breakout #1: Crafting the CTE Narrative: Tips & Tools for Modern Advocacy

In an era of shifting narratives about education and evolving perceptions of CTE, proactive storytelling is essential to effective advocacy. In this session, Dr. Mark Covelle will share how Middle Bucks Institute of Technology built a structured storytelling culture that mobilizes students and staff, leveraging social media platforms, multimedia interns, and student influencers to move from relative obscurity to a recognized leader in CTE storytelling. Participants will leave with practical, replicable tools and implementation frameworks they can use immediately to strengthen local advocacy, elevate authentic student voice, and confidently shape their own narrative.

Mark Covelle; Administrative Director; Middle Bucks Institute of Technology

5:00 p.m. – 5:30 p.m.

State Planning Time

Work with others from your state to finalize Hill visit logistics and details. Leave-behind folders will be distributed during this time, and ACTE Public Policy staff will be available to answer any remaining questions. Larger state delegations will be dismissed to meet in separate room.
